Sales Tax exemption for charter boats

LI Farm Bureau joined the Montauk Charter Boat association this winter in Albany on a mission to obtain sales tax exemption for diesel fuel on charter boats. The Long Island charter boat owners are asking for the same exemptions that are afforded the commercial vessel fleet. In addition, in order to maintain a more sustainable fishing industry, the charter boats are requesting permission to sell fish that has been legally caught and retained. This stems from a number of charter boats returning from their trips with overstock quantities of striped bass that their clients leave behind.

YF&R and ProEd

The YF&R Committee held its winter dinner social in February at the LIV (Long Island Vodka) in Riverhead (photo page 10.) More than 50 young farmers gathered for a dinner and tour of the distillery.

Last fall the Young Farmer Committee organized food donation pick-ups at various locations on the East End where accessibility was more difficult for Island Harvest, a food rescue organization on Long Island. In addition, a few of the young farmers, along with other farmer volunteers, donated their time to speak to more than 1,700 4th grade students across Long Island during a three-month educational program organized by LIFB.

LIFB also worked with Suffolk County Cornell Cooperative in organizing a "Career Day" this winter for high school seniors on the East End. The students had the opportunity to learn first-hand about the different types of careers in agriculture. After the conference, a tour of a local greenhouse completed the half-day program.

ENY farmers help special needs children

Farm Bureau members of Schenectady and surrounding counties are collaborating with STEP, the not-for-profit Saratoga Therapeutic Equestrian Program, to raise funds for scholarships that will enable special needs children ages two and up to receive therapy in STEP-UP through hippotherapy and therapeutic riding at the program's home stable in Glenville.

At the same time, they will be raising awareness of the contribution of local farmers to the economy and food source.

An afternoon of wine and cheese tasting presented by local farmers with a benefit silent auction and sit-down dinner will be held at the Glen Sanders Mansion on Sunday, April 11, from 2-6 p.m. The dinner includes live entertainment and special presentations for $45 per person. RSVP by April 3.

Sponsorships for underwriting and silent auction items are needed and are tax deductible. Equine and non-equine related items are being accepted, including farm products both perishable and non perishable. This is a wonderful opportunity to promote your local farm or business.

For information and questions on the event, call Kay White 518-366-5221 or e-mail stepatnfec@yahoo.com. www.stepup.org.

AG LITERACY EVENT IN BROOME

BROOME COUNTY FARM BUREAU hosts its annual Farm Days at the Oakdale Mall in Johnson City March 13 and 14. Local lawmakers, like County Legislator Don Moran, shown here, read 'The Tree Farmer' to children who visited with animals and learned about agriculture. The book about forestry is the Ag Literacy Week selection and was read to 2nd graders in classrooms across the state March 15-19.
