FIELD: Schumer meets with Long Island farmers on taxes, regulations

explained the financial infrastructure of LIPA.

"The long term goal of LIPA is to not be in business anymore," he said, "and to have the people power themselves by becoming more efficient and by making conscious decisions about their energy uses."

Schumer meets with farmers

Senator Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., gathered with local farmers and stakeholders during an informal meeting at Hallockville Museum Farm. Schumer is heavily involved in both estate tax reform and immigration reform and is working with other Senate leaders with input from Farm Bureau to find common ground for everyone. He feels immigration reform negotiations will commence in the weeks to come.

When it comes to estate taxes, Schumer said he believes it will come down to a compromise on spousal exemptions with an index for inflation and negotiations on the death tax rate. The current estate tax system can potentially destroy family-owned farm businesses. Farm Bureau believes a higher estate tax exemption and lower tax rate will give farmers a better chance of staying in business when transferring from one generation to the next.

Farm Credit also addressed issues with Schumer regarding exemptions from regulatory reforms.

While other government-sponsored entities (GSEs) like Fannie Mae, Freddy Mac and the Federal Treasury are being granted certain exemptions in the financial reform proposals, Farm Credit is being left in the dust.

The exemptions lay out a plan to provide security to investors through government guarantees. When the government guarantees bonds issued by GSEs, the investments with those institutions by Wall Street are definitely less risky and therefore cost less, similar to treasury bonds. In the end, Farm Credit relies on those investments in order to provide cheaper loans to businesses in the agricultural industry. Farm Credit is hoping to bring this issue to the attention of our government leaders.

The wineries voiced their concern with Schumer over a bill called the CARE Act (Comprehensive Alcohol Regulator Effectiveness), which would effectively end direct sales of New York wines to consumers in other states. This would mean a huge market loss for New York wineries that rely on self-distribution and direct shipping to retail their product. The impact of this bill would be felt statewide in all five wine-producing regions, not just Long Island.

Awards cocktail gala

This year, two deserving people in the agricultural community are being honored by the Long Island Farm Bureau. The Amherst Davis Farmer Citizen Award goes to Mary Bess Phillips. Mary Bess and her husband, Mark, own and operate a commercial fishing and retail fish market in Greenport, N.Y.

Her long-time stints with Cornell Cooperative Extension and two different terms on the Farm Bureau Board of Directors are only a fraction of her proactive involvement in her community.

This year's LIFB Citizen Award goes to Kevin Cantwell, one of our Farm Family agents from Mount Sinai. He also takes an active hands-on role in keeping agriculture strong and viable on Long Island. The proof is in his consistent and unfathomable dedication and time to supporting industry organizations like Cornell Cooperative Extension, Nassau Landscape Gardener Association, and of course, Long Island Farm Bureau.

We hope you will all join us in celebrating these achievements during the Awards Cocktail Gala on Friday, July 30, at the Inn at East Wind in Wading River.

For tickets, please call our office at (631) 727-3777.

Young Farmers

Check your mail and your email for an upcoming YF&R dinner in August. If you are between the ages of 18-35 and involved in agriculture, you're invited to join us for an evening of socializing, networking and fun! If you are interested, or would like to be put on our mailing list, please call (631) 727-3777.

Website

LIFB staff would like to remind you that there's a wealth of information on our website (www.lifb.com), everything from events to grants to industry-related information. And don't forget to sign up for our free emails to stay up-to-date on current events.
