improve pricing mechanisms to ensure the long-term viability of dairy farming in the Northeast.

Whittaker hopes to bring some of these suggestions through the New York Farm Bureau policy development process.

"The level of understanding about how deep the crisis is in the country was surprising to me," she said. "Mr. Coppes certainly had a lot of empathy for the farmer situation and knows how important it is to keep farmers farming."

"We really encourage these types of grassroots interactions between Farm Bureau leaders and important officials such as Mr. Coppes," New York Farm Bureau Director of Public Policy Julie Suarez said.

"It's pretty clear that when farmers talk directly to public officials one on one and then follow through and work with a unified voice we can accomplish great things."

BILL: FB membership saves you money

annual vote to support local food and the farms that produce it. It's a vote for green, open space in your town. It's a vote for agricultural awareness education programs in schools.

It's a vote for the organization that goes to the mat every day to protect agriculture—such as the recent filing of a "friend of the court" brief in a state appellate court case to support the right of an Adirondack farmer to build housing for farm workers. (By the way, the judges ruled five to zero in favor of the Farm Bureau position.)

And — to make it even sweeter — you can save significant money when you do it.

If you have Farm Family insurance for your car, your farm, or your rural "country estate" property, you can get lower members-only rates. The savings are about 5 percent on your personal auto insurance and about 3 percent on your property insurance.

You get automatic (and at no added cost) insurance for accidental death and dismemberment for everyone in your household — if you are a member.

You can save money on utility bills — if you are a member.

You can get a members-only discount at nearly 100 farm stands and wineries across New York State — if you are a member.

You save money on hotels, car rentals, auto parts, Grainger supplies and tools, medical prescriptions, and propane fuel. We can even help you arrange medical insurance—if you are a member.

Want to save even more? Send in your dues payment before Oct. 31 and you'll save $10 on the price of dues.
